Chip Morton is in his 10th season as the Cincinnati Bengals strength & conditioning coach. From 1999-2001, Morton was a Baltimore Ravens assistant strength & conditioning coach, and served as head strength & conditioning coach for the 2002 Washington Redskins. Morton is in his 21st NFL season, having also served as strength & conditioning assistant at San Diego from 1992-94 and as head strength & conditioning coach at Carolina from '95-98. He has coached with two Super Bowl teams — the 1994 Chargers and the 2000 World Champion Ravens. Chip started his career in the collegiate ranks, serving as assistant strength coach at Ohio State while completing his master's degree in physical education. Upon graduating from OSU, Morton became Penn State's first-ever full-time strength & conditioning assistant for the Nittany Lions football team. Morton graduated from the University of North Carolina with a degree in zoology, where he also earned a varsity letter in swimming. Chip is certified as a Level One Sports Performance Coach by the USAW and has been a Certified Strength & Conditioning Specialist through the NSCA since 1990.

Mark Asanovich recently completed his 15th season as a strength & conditioning coach in professional football with the Hartford Colonials of the UFL. A 14-year NFL veteran, Asanovich was hired by the Jacksonville Jaguars in 2003 after spending six seasons as the strength & conditioning coach for Tony Dungy's Tampa Bay Buccaneers. Prior to that, Mark served as an assistant strength coach for the Baltimore Ravens and Minnesota Vikings, as well as heading up the programs at Anoka (MN) High School and The Citadel. Recognized in Who's Who Among American Teachers, Asanovich has published numerous articles and was a contributing author in Death in the Locker Room II: Drugs and Sports (Elite Sports Medicine Publishers, 1993), and High Intensity Strength Training (Perigue Books: Putnam Publishing, 1993). Asanovich earned his bachelor's degree in education from St. Cloud State and his master's in exercise science from The Ohio State University. As a clinician, Asanovich has spoken nationally and abroad. He has also served as a clinician/faculty member for the American College of Sports Medicine, Hamline University, and St. Thomas University (St. Paul, MN).
